Dear Jim,

As I mentioned in my letter of 21 August, I want to keep you posted on major actions taken by the PRC(I) with regard to Intelligence Priorities. You will find attached a copy of the National Intelligence Topics approved by the White House earlier this month for use by intelligence collectors and producers.

The Topics of Long-term Interest are intended to guide the development of Intelligence Community capabilities for collection, research, and analysis over the longer term. The purpose of the Topics of Current Interest is to inform the Community of the needs of senior policymakers for information and analysis over the next six to nine months.

The Topics and their relative priorities will be reviewed and updated by the PRC(I) every four months. Any comments or suggestions you may have will be much appreciated.

Yours,

Dear Juanita,

At the last PRC(I) meeting the question of expanded participation when addressing Intelligence Priorities was discussed. Though it was recognized that your department does have an interest when Priorities are considered by the PRC(I), the Committee felt it was already too large for the type of exchange necessary between principals to expand its size further.

In view of your responsibilities and your department's requirements for intelligence, however, I will undertake to coordinate with you prior to meetings on Priorities and to keep you apprised of key decisions made. In this way I will attempt to represent your views when these matters are discussed.

Your comments and perspectives as a consumer of intelligence are always most welcome, for it is only through such an exchange of ideas that our intelligence product can be made most responsive.

Yours,

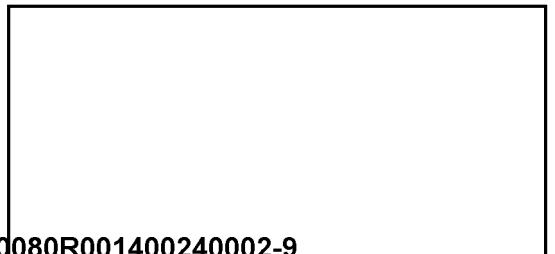

STANSFIELD TURNER
